Mandated Reporter Guidelines Updated
Collaboration between County Counsel and Domestic Violence Advocacy Agencies

County Counsel’s mandated reporter guidelines for children exposed to domestic violence caused alarm among domestic violence agency staff at the Greenbook quarterly meeting January 31, 2003. Many domestic violence agency representatives remarked that if the guidelines were to be interpreted literally, they would have to report every child that entered their services and shelters. In an effort to bring the two systems together on this issue, a meeting was held between County Counsel and the domestic violence agencies to review the mandated reporter guidelines. At the meeting, the agencies and County Council were able to collaborate and negotiate more specific guidelines for mandated reporters.

“The question of when to report domestic violence to Child Protective Services has generated heated discussion across the nation in recent years. Some argue that all children exposed to domestic violence should be reported to CPS. Others argue that such an approach discourages women from seeking protection from police and further victimizes the mother and child. I believe these guidelines appropriately balance the competing concerns in a manner consistent with California reporting law,” stated Mike Clark, Lead Deputy County Counsel.

Mike Clark also commented that, “It has been a pleasure to work with the child protection and domestic violence communities on this complex issue. I have been impressed with their respective expertise, their common passion to assist all victims of family violence, and their willingness to learn from one another.”

Erin O’Brien, Chief Executive Officer at Community Solutions for Children Families and Communities stated that, “It was very gratifying to work with Mike Clark and the office of County Counsel on this issue. We began from positions which seemed to be completely polarized and were able to work together, productively and amicably, to create a document and policies which everyone was able to support.”

Zonia Sandoval Waldon, RCCI Co-chair, Retires after 31 years of Service at DFCS

Zonia Sandoval Waldon, former Deputy Director of the Department of Family and Children’s Services, Social Services Agency, played an instrumental role in the success of the Respect Culture and Community Initiative Committee as the co-chair for the past 1 1/2 years. The RCCI Committee would like to thank Zonia for her leadership, vision and commitment. Zonia recently retired from the Department of Family and Children’s Services after 31 years of service.

“Zonia was always willing to go that extra mile on behalf of families and children in our diverse communities. Her leadership led to the success of RCCI’s accomplishments and we will miss her very much,” stated the Honorable Katherine Lucero, RCCI co-chair.

RCCI has convened four meetings with community leaders to strategize ways to raise awareness and accountability on the overlap of domestic violence and child abuse in the community. These meetings provide an opportunity for community leaders and service providers to work together to prevent domestic violence.

WHEN TO CONTACT CHILD PROTECTIVE SERVICES (CPS) IN DOMESTIC VIOLENCE CASES: A GUIDE FOR MANDATED REPORTERS

Revised May 2003

L. Michael Clark, Lead Deputy County Counsel, Santa Clara County
E-Mail: mike.clark@cco.co.santa-clara.ca.us

1. Under California law a mandated reporter must report, among other things, willful child endangerment or the willful infliction of unjustifiable physical pain or mental suffering on a child. See Penal Code § 11165.3. In the context of domestic violence, a mandated reporter must consider whether there is a risk of physical or emotional harm to the child. The fact that a child’s parent or guardian has been the victim of domestic violence is not in and of itself a sufficient basis for reporting suspected child abuse or neglect. Further, a child’s exposure to a domestic violence incident in and of itself is not a sufficient basis for reporting suspected abuse or neglect. Other factors must exist which lead the mandated reporter to reasonably suspect that the child’s physical or emotional health is endangered as the result of domestic violence. Mandated reporters in Santa Clara County may consult with a screener at the CPS Hotline at 408-299-2071 to determine whether a report is required.

2. A mandated reporter must report suspected child abuse or neglect to Child Protective Services (CPS) in the following domestic violence cases:

a. A domestic violence incident which caused physical injury to the child or created a serious risk of physical injury to the child.

Factors to consider in determining whether a domestic violence incident created a serious risk of physical injury to the child include, but are not limited to the following: Were objects thrown or broken in the presence of the child? Did the perpetrator threaten to harm or conceal the child? Did the perpetrator strike a victim who was holding a child or did the perpetrator hold a child while striking the victim? Did the child physically intervene in the domestic violence? Did the perpetrator threaten to kill or commit suicide? Did the perpetrator threaten the victim with a gun, knife or other weapon? Did the perpetrator kick or bite or hit the victim with a fist? Did the perpetrator hit or attempt to hit the victim with an object? Did the perpetrator choke or strangle the victim? Did the perpetrator stalk the victim or child?

OR

b. A domestic violence incident which caused serious emotional damage to the child or created a substantial risk of serious emotional damage to the child.

Serious emotional damage (SED) in the context of child protection law means the child exhibits severe anxiety, depression, withdrawal, untoward aggressive behavior toward self or others, as the result of the conduct of a parent or whose parent is incapable of providing appropriate care. (See Welfare and Institutions Code § 300, subd. (c).) A report should be made if the child’s SED was caused by domestic violence perpetrated by a parent. Regardless of who the perpetrator is, a report also should be made if the parent who is a victim of domestic violence is: (a) incapable of providing for the child’s treatment or care for SED caused by domestic violence; or (b) unable to protect the child from repeated exposure to domestic violence even with the assistance of community and child welfare services.

3. A report to CPS does not mean that the child will be removed from the domestic violence victim’s home. The CPS social worker must consider the complexities of each case and determine the impact of the domestic violence incident (and other indications of maltreatment) on the child. The law requires that CPS make a reasonable effort to prevent the need for removal of any child and keep the child in the care of a non-offending parent whenever possible. The child’s safety will be assessed in terms of “the nature and severity of past violence, the risk of violence in the future, the child’s degree of exposure and resilience, the presence of protective factors in the immediate and extended family, and available support from the community.” (See Effective Intervention in Domestic Violence and Child Maltreatment Cases: Guidelines for Policy and Practice (“Green Book”), National Council of Juvenile and Family Court Judges, 1999, p. 64.)
Greenbook Project Committee Updates

Respect Culture & Community Initiative (RCCI)
Chairs: Hon. Katherine Lucero
The goal of this committee is to develop outreach plans and conduct an assessment to identify needs of families impacted by domestic violence and child maltreatment. Initiative members are currently convening community leaders and gatekeepers to identify community needs, educate leaders on resources for families and create an ongoing dialogue on domestic violence and child maltreatment. In addition, the initiative is committed to addressing the overrepresentation of children of color in CPS.
Meetings held 1st Tuesday, 12:15-1:30 p.m.
Kids in Common, 1046 W. Taylor St, San Jose

Project 1 Development and Training of Domestic Violence Advocates
Chair: Nancy Marshall
This project has developed a protocol for placing domestic violence advocates in child protective services. The domestic violence advocate will follow the client throughout the life of the case in an effort to encourage positive outcomes for the victim and children.

Santa Clara County Receives Arrest Grant Award
Office on Violence Against Women Funds Advocacy Programs

September 2003 The Office of Justice Programs awarded Santa Clara County’s application for funding under the Grants to Encourage Arrest Policies and Enforcement of Protection Orders Program. Three programs will be funded under this grant: the South County Domestic Violence Response Team (DVRT), the North County Response to Family Violence, and a Language Bank for Asian immigrant victims of domestic violence.

The Office of the County Executive submitted the grant application on behalf of domestic violence community based organizations, law enforcement agencies and the Department of Family and Children’s Services, Social Services Agency.

The goals of the South County Domestic Violence Response Team (DVRT) are to provide support, information and resources to victims of domestic violence and divert families from the child welfare system whenever possible. DVRT will provide an immediate response team for domestic violence victims and their children, consisting of an officer, a victim advocate and a social worker (when children reside in the home). The Social Services Agency, Department of Family and Children’s Services, Community Solutions, Gilroy Police Department, Morgan Hill Police Department and the Office of the Sheriff will implement the DVRT multidisciplinary immediate response team.

The goals of the North County Response to Family Violence are: (1) to reach domestic violence and child abuse victims in order to inform and educate them on the available support, assistance and resources in Santa Clara County; (2) to assist and empower victims of domestic violence crimes by providing support through court accompaniments and education about the criminal justice system; and (3) to advocate for clients with police departments, attorneys, courts, district attorney’s office, probation department, and other agencies. The Support Network for Battered Women, Sunnyvale Public Safety, Mountain View and Palo Alto Police Departments will implement the Response to Family Violence program.

The goal of the Language Bank is to connect Asian immigrant victims with an advocate that speaks their language.

This October, during Domestic Violence Awareness Month, the U.S. Postal Service (USPS) issued the first ever Stop Family Violence stamp. Known as a semipostal, the stamp will raise money to help prevent domestic violence. Stamps went on sale at post offices around the country on October 11. “The Postal Service is pleased to announce the availability of the Stop Family Violence stamp,” said Donna Peak, controller and vice president of Finance, USPS, when she dedicated the stamp. "The Postal Service has a proud tradition of issuing stamps to help raise awareness of social issues. The Stop Family Violence stamp takes this wonderful tradition a step further by providing funds for a worthy cause. We encourage everyone to purchase and use the Stop Family Violence stamp on their cards and letters."

For the stamp’s design, the USPS selected artwork by a young girl that expresses the pain and sadness that domestic violence causes children and families. The stamp features her picture of a crying child raising her arms in the air. It reads, "Stop Family Violence," in yellow, and has the look of a chalk or crayon drawing. Funds raised from the sale of Stop Family Violence stamps will be transferred to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) to assist domestic violence programs. The stamps will be sold for 45 cents. The difference between the sale price and the First-Class Mail rate, minus costs to the USPS, will be donated to the HHS. Stamps are scheduled to remain on sale through December 31, 2006.

The Stop Family Violence stamp is the third U.S. stamp to have its net proceeds earmarked for a specified cause. The first semipostal – the Breast Cancer Research stamp – was issued in 1998. The Heroes of 2001 semipostal was issued in 2002. The Stop Family Violence stamps are available at post offices or from vending machines at postal and non-postal locations. They also can be ordered by toll-free telephone at 1-800 STAMP-24 or online at www.usps.com/shop.
